ABOUT SAKE

The closest comparison you could make to sake with conventional liquor would be to call sake a “rice wine”. Although sake is not technically a wine for many reasons, it contains approximately the same amount of alcohol as wine (roughly between 12-16%) and is served in similar size vessels.

---

THERE ARE
TWO MAJOR CATEGORIES

---

JUNMAI

PURE RICE SAKE

Pure rice sake can only be made with four ingredients, water, rice, yeast and koji-kin.

HONJOZO

FORTIFIED SAKE

Fortified sake has the same four ingredients as pure rice sake, but a little brewer's alcohol is added at the end for flavoring.

Sake is the perfect compliment to any meal containing sushi or fish. Its delicate flavor and aromas also pair well with almost any seafood or lightly seasoned meal. Different types of sake, such as junmai, junmai ginjo or junmai daiginjo all have their own flavor profile. Everything from light citrus to rich crème to cashews and banana can be experienced in well-balanced sake.

For pairing suggestions, please ask your server for assistance.

We would love to share our passion for sake with you.
